

Producer Responsibility Organization

The Department of Forestry, Fisheries, and the Environment has introduced mandatory Extended Producer Responsibility (EPR) regulations to reduce the environmental impact of waste materials. The regulations aim to drive the collection, sortation, and recycling of waste materials, promote design for recyclability, and involve all relevant stakeholders in the recycling process. Producers are required to pay a fee for the waste materials they put out into the market. The regulations cover packaging, lighting, and electronic equipment, and require collection to meet recycling targets. The Consumer Goods Council of South Africa (CGCSA) is well positioned to act as the Producer Responsibility Organisation (PRO) to ensure members work together to reduce environmental impact and advocate for necessary changes in the regulations.
